Student-teacher ratio expresses the relationship between the number of students enrolled in the college and the number of full-time teachers employed by the Institution. Student-teacher ratios are a general way to measure teacher workloads and resource allocations, as well as the amount of individual attention a student is likely to receive from teachers. Student-teacher ratios are often used as broad indicators of the overall quality of the Institution. “Ideal” student-teacher ratios will depend on a wide variety of complex factors, including the age and academic needs of the students represented in the ratio or the experience, skill, and effectiveness of the teachers.

The UGC system prescribe a varied set of required teacher-student ratio for different streams of studies. For PG programmes, the new regulations make it mandatory for Universities to have at least one teacher for every 6 students and the Under Graduate programmes the teacher-student ratio should be 1:20.

Sri Bhagawan Mahaveer Jain First Grade College has a good recruitment policy and hence recruits its faculty as per the requirements of the program offered also considering the intake of the student. The teachers are appointed as full time faculty as per the norms of Bangalore North University and the Institution.

Over a period of past 5 years this Institution is having an average of 20:1 student-teacher ratio which is good.
